

Abstract of the Disclosure

5 In a method of controlling an adaptive menu of a digital camera, at least two menu items are sequentially displayed according to a set display order. An initially active menu item from among the displayed menu items is activated. A user selects a desired menu item. At least one of either the display order of the menu items or the initially active menu item is set according to the number of uses of each of the menu items.